

What To Do Now...

One and a half months after the tsunami hit parts of Phuket, the cleanup is well underway. All bays have been cleared and re-construction is carrying on at a frenetic pace. The focus has moved to other parts of the coast that have more severe damage and fewer resources. Local fundraising has contributed a large sum of money to be put to rebuilding schools, villages and helping with the aftermath of the wave.

We thank everyone who has helped since day one; you are a credit to this community. We have spread some photos throughout this magazine of the change that has been achieved due to the resilient and tenacious nature of everyone concerned. We also thank our advertisers for their support and ask you to support them too. We all realise that it will take more than a wave to keep Phuket down.
