

El Visa Run To Perth - From Page 6

I told the next taxi driver the same thing about cheap accommodation - well done here - 6,000 Baht. So I started walking and thought I might as well stay up all night.

Another taxi. He's got the picture - YMCA 1,150 Baht. You get what you pay for, but OK - didn't manage to get a shower though as time was now getting short

I headed straight to the Consulate - Visa done in 15 minutes - Brilliant.

Now what, I had 10 hours to fill in so decided to head for Dirty Nelly's and then to Carnegies. Hit the airport at 10.30pm and ran into 4 guys from Patong who drink at 2 Black Sheep. Great.

1.00am no boarding - 2.00am delay - 2,30am cancelled due to hydraulics - right - its back through immigration because we all have a free hotel - I'm going through and believe it or not its the same bloody Officer - We stared at each other and I said for (expletive deleted) sake not again!!!

The guy remembered my name and patted me on the back and said its OK Mr Scott no problems.

Next - I needed to be in BKK the next day and ground staff said they would do their best - got to sleep at about 4.00 am - but get this - the hotel the airline booked us into was the Holiday Inn at the Casino and the same (expletive deleted) had to check me in for free - he did not like that which may account for what happened next.

I woke up at 11.00am - and under the door was a note to say that I was booked on a flight at 11.00am to Singapore - Great!!! Showered and went down - talked to Air Staff and pointed out that Australia does actually have telephones.

I managed to get on a late evening flight to Singapore at the last minute - that's 6 more hours of Red Wine - Brilliant! - but we are not in time for a connection so its overnight there.

Arrival at the Airport - I decided it might be wise to go to the loo - Same Gate - Go in and Bugger!! Its the same attendant - he recognised me and his eyes started rolling and his head swinging - he opened the first available - no accident.

I finally got back to Phuket five days after schedule.
