should be built to one of the economic powerhouses of Phuket, namely the Isaan girls who populate certain parts of the island and bring in more cash from overseas that most other industries put together. For a group that has little education and looks that the locals don't think is really attractive, they certainly must have money extraction firmly embedded in their genes (no pun intended). For their targeted group, generally educated men who are successful in their professional lives, it comes as quite a surprise when they remove the rose-coloured glasses to find that everything they have built up over the years has been extracted from them with the blink of an eye.
