HUMANITY WRAP - Continued from Page 5

Overheard:

"Do you think the banned TRT politicians have learned from their mistakes?"

"What mistakes?"

"Is Bangkok twinned with any city?"

"Not sure, but if it gets any more polluted I hear they are planning a suicide pact with Chengdu, where the weather is so shite the dogs bark at the sun."

Quote of the week:

"For you, an Englishman, an Irishman and a Scotsman is a joke. For us, it's a hostage situation.

"Normally, Iranians don't go out: they're too busy staying at home and enriching Uranium 235. Iran's only exports are pistachio nuts and massive international ill feeling."

(British-Iranian comedian Omid Djalili)

"If we just stood by, not even dogs would survive in Burma under these bastards brutality and inhumanity," a woman in Mandalay, pledging that residents were ready to assist the monks whenever their help was needed.

(From the Democratic Voice of Burma)

Seriously Cheekiest Quote of the week:

Thaksin Shinawatra "announced that 'Manchester City (nicknamed Human Rights FC by shed-loads of Manchester United fans) are a sleeping giant. I'm glad to be the one to wake that giant.' Well, you'd wake up pretty sharpish too if alleged serial human-rights abuser Trashcan Sinatras was standing over you grinning." Guardian Unlimited, The Football Fiver section. Ouch!

Stats and bitz:

It's not only a mad world, it's also that time of year again. The European Court of Auditors has refused to sign off on the EU's accounts - for the 13th year in a row - because, it says, there is EUR13 billion unaccounted for. In the meantime, EUR14.5 billion has been spent on an EU study this year to investigate reducing its administration costs.

Egyptians, Indians and Turks search for "sex" on Google more than any other nationality. "Hitler" is most popular in Germany, Austria and Mexico; "Nazi" in Chile, Australia and Britain. "David Beckham" gets most hits in Venezuela. (Reuters, October 2007).

Yasser Arafat was a Nobel Peace-Prize winner. Mahatma Gandhi was not. It just isn't a very credible process. It should have gone to the Burmese monks.

Ronnie Wood of The Rolling Stones is bringing out an autobiography this month: "In New York in the 80s, Jo and I were always having people over to party with us. On one occasion, our son Jamie came downstairs in the morning and noticed someone on the sofa who was completely out of it.

"When Jamie eventually realised it was Christopher Reeve, he ran into our room crying: 'You've destroyed Superman'."
